"It required a half million dollars to depict the story of the tea plant for Boston & posterity. The tale is executed in 5 descriptive panels on the bronze doors of the Salada Tea Company. Henry Wilson, noted English sculptor, designed the doors which were cast in Providnece

Foo-dogs which guard either side of the Stuart St. entrance are considered some of the best examples of cloisonne ware in the world. They belong to the Ch'ien Lung dynasty & were formerly stationed in the Peiping Temple.

The art coll ction which graces the bldg. was brought to this country by Peter Larkin, who during his lifetime aquired prominence as an art collector.

From "Ask the Globe," Boston Globe, Aug. 8, 1995, p.36:

Q: What happened to the old Schrafft's candy factory in the Charlestown section of this city?

A: After Schrafft's closed in 1984 the building was bought by developer Thomas Flatley and turned into an office building. Among the current tenants, according to Flatley spokesman Butch Vatalaro, are the local office of US Rep. Joseph Kennedy 2d, Delta Dental Insurance, A Fleet Bank processing office, business radio station WBNW, women's clothing manufacturer Susan Bristol and the regional distributor for CCM hockey equipment.

"...was begun in July, 1868, and occupied in June of the present year (1869). It has a frontage of 95' on Washington St., and 150' on Court St., is 4 stories high, besides a basement entered from the street, & a high roof. These 6 stories are brought into easy connection with each other by means of a passenger elevator in the centre of the bldg which is, we believe, the 1st which has ever been applied to any mercantile bldg. The owners regarded its introduction as an experiment, in view of the doubts freely expressed whether anybody in a hurry to get from the bottom of the bldg. to the top would wait ½ a minute at the foot of an elevator shaft for the car to descend to take them in,

We believe that owners and tenants are now, after a 3 months' trial, equally well satisfied than an elevator which is at once speedy & safe is a most useful complement to a high staircase."

"This bldg. is too conspicuous to need a description & we will therefore only say that it is blt throughout in a very solid & thorough manner, finished inside for the most part w/chestnut, & faced on the outside w/white Tuckahoe marble, mingled with gray marble from Dover, NY, & Quincy granite. The offices are occupied chiefly by banks, insurance companies & railroad & manufacturing

concerns(?), and some of them are finished with a good deal of luxury. The bldg. was built from the plans & under the direction of Messors

"The Sears Bldg, on the cor. of Court & Wash. sts, is one of the finest, as it was also for its size one of the costliest. The land was bought & the work of tearing down the old bldgs was begun in June, 1868. The foundation was laid in July, & within a year the new bldg. was occupied. I has a front of 55' on Wash.St, & of 149' on Court. It is blt. in the Italian-Gothic style of architecture & the external walls being constructed of gray & White marble, the contrast of which is highly pleasing. The price paid for the land on which this bldg stands was $356,000 which was at the rate of about $43/sq.ft. & the bldg itself bought the the entire cost of the property up to about 3/4million$. It is furnished w/in a style of great elegance & is occupied by 2 banks, several insrance companies, a score or more of railroad compaiies, enginer treasurers of companies, etc. A steam elevator of the best pattern conveys passengers from the street floor to the highest story. This elegant structure is one of the many belonging to the Sears estate.

Allston. demolished by the Beal Companies to make way for a $20 million dollar shopping center that will include a Star Market, Bed & Bath and other retail stores Five structures from the 1887 manufactory stood on a long narrow parcel perpendicular to Western Avenue. Two mill buildings, the Engine House, Boiler House and Store HOuse- brick structures with granite block foundations, rough granite sills and corbelled cornices- survived from the area's first and largest 19th century industrial development. Between 1921 and 1963, the mills were occupied by the New England Spun Silk Company...

BOSTON. BLDGS.-A-Z. STATE STREET BLOCK -

State Street Block Some Bostonians bemoaned the 1858 construction of the State Street Block, because it obstructed the view of the Custom House from the harbor. Designed by Gridley J. F. Bryant, the architect of Old City Hall, the building is granite with Renaissance details, such as the arched gable pediment over the Globe. Its rough-hewn blocks are the primary focus of the design. Only a segment of the original State Street Block remains; another 16 bays extending toward the water were demolished to make way for Atlantic Avenue and later the Fitzgerald Expressway.

Appears on the 1733 Bonner map as structure on the Common. Built on the Common in 1729 near the site of the present subterranean public toilets. In 1737, it was moved to the site of Park St. Church and so gave its name to the adjacent burying ground. This vast structure was removed in 1809 and the present Park St. Church building was built on its site.

Boston. Bldgs. A-Z. Tremont (Office) Building
Damrell, Half Century.., p. 102.

"The building which will occupy the site of the fa ous old Tremont House will be of a different nature from that which it was intended should be built by Mr. Frederick L. Ames, whosedeath made a change in the arrangements desitable. Mr. Ames had prepared a set of plans, calling for a magnificent and palatial hotel as a fitting successor to the historic old house whih has recently been razed. After his death, however, the plan was given up and the property passed into other hands. A plan has now been prepared and the workd of construction be un on a very large office and store building, which , when completed, will be one of the finest in the city. (A desciption follows.)
